BACKGROUND AND EXPERIENCE

Michael Jenkins, Ph.D. is an Executive Coach for Crenshaw Associates. In his 30+ year career in Coaching, Human Resources and Talent Management, Michael has worked throughout organizations providing support, counsel, and coaching to leaders at all levels. He seeks to help leaders impact the business, whether they are entrepreneurs who own their own business, front line leaders looking to build new skills, or executive leaders who are leaving their legacy on the business and other leaders. Through his own insight, as well as insights gained from assessments, he challenges, guides, and inspires others to reach higher levels of leadership and business performance. Michael has facilitated Partnering workshops, conducted team building sessions, trained and coached leaders internationally.

In addition to coaching, Michael has been a faculty member at two Universities and spent over 25 years in Human Resources and Talent Management in Fortune 500 companies including AutoZone, Southern Company, Medco, and The Home Depot. During his time in corporate roles and maintaining a consulting practice, Michael has focused on leadership development, executive coaching, team building, and strategic planning.

Michael received his undergraduate degree from Southwest Baptist University and his Ph.D. from the University of Southern Mississippi. He has certifications in numerous assessment and development tools and has written on such topics as execution and leadership and published research in Training and Development Journal, Journal of Organizational Behavior, and Management Research News.
